STATEWIDE CURRENT SITUATION: Tropical Depression Harvey continues to move north-northeast and the center of the storm will cross from Louisiana into Mississippi around noon today. Isolated light rain associated with Harvey remains along the Texas - Louisiana border and will linger throughout the day. No significant rainfall is expected to affect the areas impacted by Harvey over the next three days. Several rivers will remain above "Major" flood stage creating life-threatening conditions over the next couple of days into the weekend including the Guadalupe, Brazos, Trinity, and Neches Rivers.

By Sunday and into early next week, there will be increased chances for rain along the Texas coast and into southeast Texas. There is the potential for another tropical system to develop in the Gulf of Mexico early next week. There is currently no weather system in the Gulf, but an area of low pressure could form over the southwestern Gulf of Mexico by the weekend. Development, if any, of this system is expected to be slow to occur as the low moves slowly northward. If this system does develop, it could bring additional rainfall to portions of the Texas and Louisiana coasts. However, any rainfall forecast is uncertain at this time and it is too soon to determine any specific impacts.

The National Hurricane Center currently has a near 0% chance of tropical cyclone development in the next 2 days and a 20% chance of development within the next 5 days.

Significant River Flood Outlook

Valid: 8/30/2017 - 9/4/2017

SIGNIFICANT RIVER FLOODING POSSIBLE.

SIGNIFICANT RIVER FLOODING LIKELY.

SIGNIFICANT RIVER
FLOODING OCCURRING OR IS IMMINENT.

Significant River Flooding Impacts include:
Roads adversely affected. Residential, commercial, industrial, and/or agricultural areas affected. May require evacuation of people.

NOTE: Flash Flooding or Minor River Flooding will NOT be included in this outlook.

Trinity Basin – Record Flooding – Flooding continues on the Trinity River above major flood levels at Goodrich (GRIT2), Romayor (RMYT2), and Liberty (LBYT2), and at Menard Creek at Rye (RYET2). The flood levels at Liberty are above the record. Moss Bluff (MBFT2) is also forecast to exceed major flood stage, which is the first time on record.

Neches Basin – Record Flooding – Recent heavy rain and the additional anticipated rains for the next couple of days will generate moderate to near record flooding at several locations along the Neches from Diboll (DIBT2) and Rockland to Beaumont. Both Village Creek (KOUT2) and Pine Island Bayou (SOLT2) are rising into historic levels.

Brazos Basin – Record Flooding – The very lower end of the Brazos river system has received less than 0.5 inches of precipitation in the past 24 hours ending at 12z Wednesday. The very lower end of the Brazos river system has received between 4-9 inches at RMOT2 and below in the past 24 hours ending at 12z Tuesday morning. A total of 4 to 9 inches fell at WBZT2 and below for the 24 hours ending at 12z on Monday morning. The Brazos river system has received between 7 to 12 inches at WBZT2 and HPTDT2 and below in the 24 hours period ending at 12z on Sunday morning. The lower end of the Brazos received 4 to 10 inches of precipitation in the previous 24 hour period ending at 12z on Saturday. The storm total MAP in the 27 to 38 inch range for the lower Brazos.

It cannot be stressed enough that this is a local event for the lower Brazos. Most of the precipitation has fallen on top of the lower Brazos river. This scenario is vastly different than the 2016 Memorial Day flood, which was entirely driven by routed flow through the lower Brazos.

The largest impacts (Major Flood Stage) will be occurring at the lower end of the Brazos at: the Brazos River at San Felipe (BAWT2), the Brazos River at Richmond (RMOT2), Brazos River at Rosharon (ROST2), and Brazos River at West Columbia (WCBT2).

Current forecasts are based on 72 hours of QPF, however the next 72 hours total is 0 inches.

Future QPF beyond 72 hours will have no impact on current crest forecasts, as Harvey has moved out of the area. River forecast confidence will increase in the next 24 to 48 hours as upstream crests arrive and Harvey moves out of the area.

Sabine Basin – Record Flooding – Widespread, intense rainfall associated with Harvey (both observed and forecast) will produce moderate to major flooding on the lower Sabine River system from Rosepine and Bon Wier downstream through Deweyville (DWYT2) and Orange (ORNT2).

Guadalupe Basin – Major Flooding – Heavy rainfall from Harvey significantly affected the lower portions of the Guadalupe River basin over the weekend and the routed water is still making its way through the system. Expect major flooding as a result. Additional rainfall is not expected in this event.

All tributaries including Sandies Creek, the San Marcos River, and Plum Creek have crested and are now falling, or have now fallen below critical levels. The Plum Creek gage near Luling (LULT2) is still non-operational after being washed out in the flood.

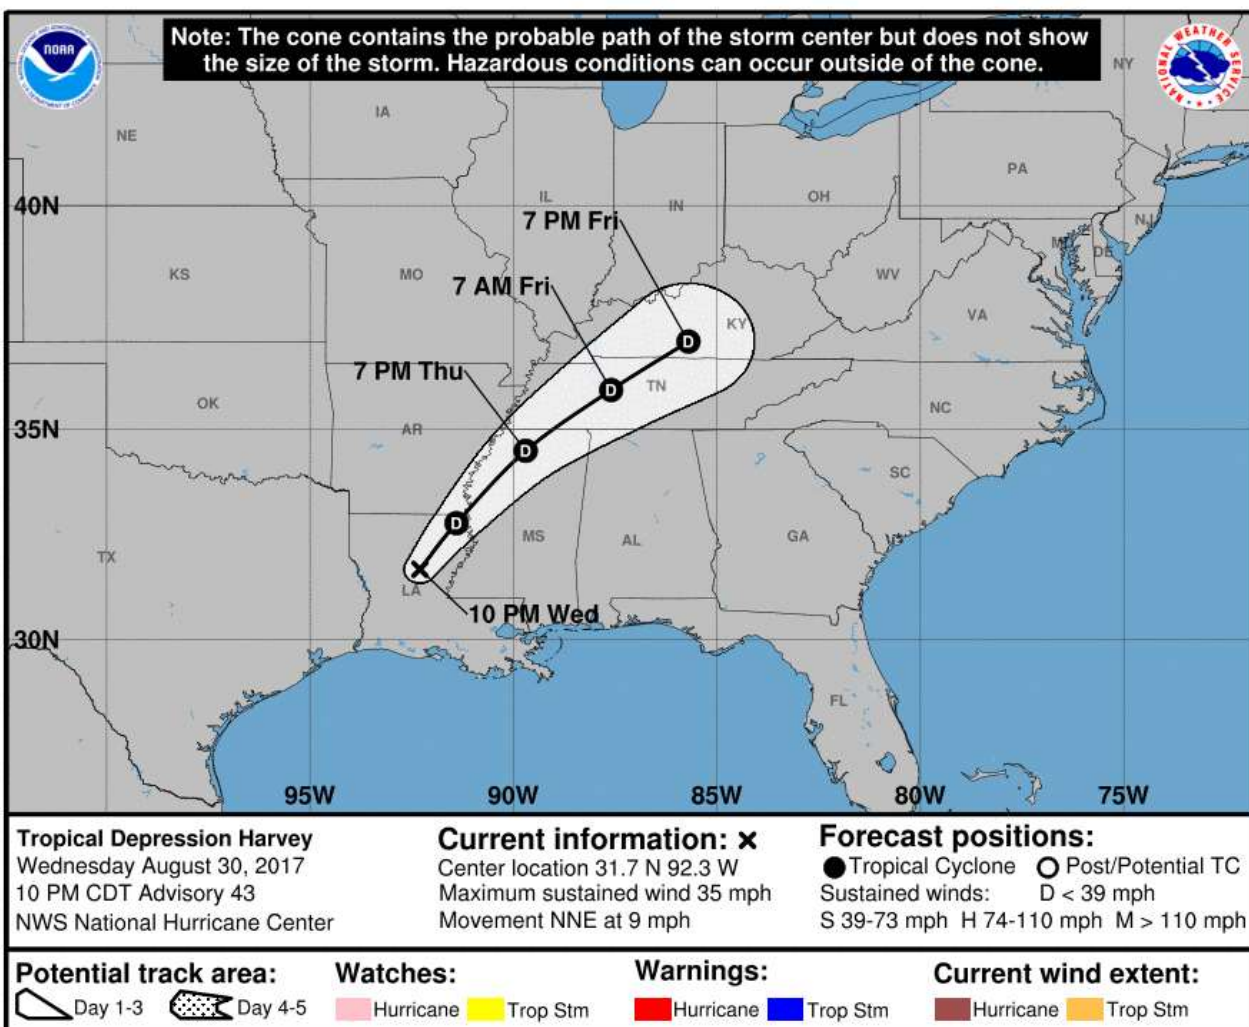

On the Guadalupe River, Cuero (CUET2) has crested and is now falling. However, river levels still remain in major flood. Major flooding is also forecast downstream at Victoria (VICT2) and at the Du Pont Plant near Bloomington (DUPT2).

San Jacinto Basin – Major Flooding – Most of the basins across the San Jacinto system, including the larger creeks and bayous, have crested. Many basins are still experiencing major to record flooding. With the rainfall threat ending, significant flooding will continue into the weekend and most likely next week. Lake Conroe is reducing releases. Lake Houston releases will continue. Addicks and Barker Reservoirs are making releases as well, with Buffalo Bayou remaining in flood stage/above criteria until further notice.

Lavaca-Navidad Basin – Major Flooding – Harvey rainfall is causing major flooding across the Lavaca-Navidad Basin.

Colorado Basin – Major Flooding – Harvey rainfall is causing major flooding across the lower Colorado basin. River levels are still rising on the most downstream sections of this basin.

San Bernard Basin – Major Flooding – Harvey rainfall is causing widespread major to record flooding across the San Bernard basin.
